COVER STORY

The food, the views, the experience at Le Bar A Boeuf

When Patrick Bowling stepped into the role of chef de cuisine at La Bar à Boeuf last September, it was a natural transition. His passion for cooking dates back to childhood, when he spent time in the kitchen with his grandmother, a school cook. One early memory stands out: tossing raisins in a skillet while wearing a onesie. “I was a cook before I knew I was a cook,” he says.

After graduating from LaSalle, Bowling briefly attended college on a soccer scholarship before feeling drawn back to the restaurant world. Starting as a bartender and then a server, his big break came unexpectedly when he was asked to fill in as an expeditor. Handed a chef coat, something clicked. “It was like it was made specifically for me,” he recalls. He never left the kitchen after that moment.

His career evolved through key roles, including working under acclaimed chef Jean-Robert de Cavel. From Pho Paris to Chalk Food + Wine, and later positions at Cumin and Paco o Paco, Bowling steadily climbed the ranks. He eventually reunited with de Cavel before continuing his journey through various kitchens, including Blackberry Farm.

Returning to a familiar and supportive environment, he found stability within the de Cavel Group. When the opportunity at La Bar à Boeuf arose, he embraced it fully. Now, Bowling is focused on honoring French culinary traditions while adapting the dining experience for modern audiences, balancing respect for the past with a vision for the future.

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

FORM

FORM was created as a natural extension of Idlewild—born from the same point of view, but designed to explore a different side of the story. Together, the two stores are in conversation: while Idlewild continues to ground itself in timeless wardrobe staples, FORM highlights the artful side of fashion and lifestyle — a showroom for clothing, shoes, and objects that invite curiosity. FORM is a space to try things on — literally and conceptually. These spaces share a foundation, but speak in slightly different tones — each enriching the other.”

Tessa Clark is the co-owner of Idlewild and Form, a curated clothing store in Cincinnati, Ohio, known for its timeless and creative approach to fashion. With a sharp eye for design and a deep appreciation for craftsmanship, Tessa first gained national recognition as a contestant on Season 17 of Project Runway on Bravo. Her background in fashion design and retail has shaped her approach to styling, curating, and fostering a community around high-quality, distinctive pieces. At Idlewild, she brings her passion for thoughtful design together with a commitment to personal styling and exceptional client experiences.
